

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to an additive and method to simultaneously reduce both the carbon in ash and the NO_x production levels resulting from the combustion of coal by the use of at least one manganese-containing additive. Use of a manganese-containing additive in a coal burning utility furnace results in both a lower carbon in ash content and lower NO_x emissions.